CORAM: A.M.KHANWILKAR,J

DATE : JUNE 10, 2005

P.C. :-

1. Conditional order was passed on 3rd December, 1998. It appears that the company took the matter in appeal before the Division Bench, which was however, rejected. Later on, the company has settled the dispute by giving the amount as agreed between the parties. This position can be seen from the correspondence between the parties, which is tendered across the bar. Even the counsel appearing for petitioner accepts this position.

2. Indeed, petition was admitted because the conditional order was not complied with. However, petitioner did not move this court to seek direction regarding advertisement in terms of liberty granted under clause (iii) of the order dated 3rd December, 1998. In other words, petition has not been advertised. As the parties have amicably resolved their dispute and as the petitioner has no claim against the respondent company, this petition is dismissed as withdrawn.
